which I have referred have engendered, will be obliterated and expunged; that the people of the whote American Union will again fraternize as brothers—harmonise, and together uphold the institutions which they have inherited from their fathers; and that our Republic, restored to tranquility and harmony, shielding, protecting, and making happy all of its children, will go forward in its career of prespective, greatness. go forward in its career of presperity, greatness, and glory, and be as a sun in the heavens to all the nations of the earth, lighting up their pathway to freedom and happiness like that which we enjoy. And if these two great parties do not thus act, I have serious and painful fears that the fountain of bitter waters, which, as these many years; through triefs and tribule to be exceeded in the military career has been more brilliant than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of any other time, but the subject, to proclaim the military career has been more brilliant than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of any other General since Washington's day, yet it is a fact that ought to be observed by those who are cipkering up the sum availability, that somehow or somehow else—I will not undertake to explain and define it—where part is not the subject, to proclaim themselves patriots, and act as patriot is minustry career has been distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of those distinguished Generals, or than that of either of t that the fountain of bitter waters, which, as we hoped, had been sealed forever by the exercions of those brave and noble patriots who co-operated together in passing the Compromise to honorable gentlemen who commanded my lackson, Harrison, and Taylor. They admire measures, will be re opened, and that actional personal respect, and whom I regarded as pastrife, sectional antagonism, denunciations of triots, and said to them, these apeeches, these the North by the South, and the South by the North, will again be the order of the day; and gations of patriotism, and while I act with you that presently, instead of argument, reason, and the ballot-box to adjust questions relating to the this course, it is impossible for a southern man, interests of this great Republic, we shall be thrown upon that last resort—the cartridge-box, bayonets, and the sword. That is what I fear.

Talk not to me about party victory or defeat constantly answered, "Oh, don't be unessy, when such interests as these are involved!— our votes and speeches mean nothing; we are Better—infinitely better—to be defeated by do-but accommodating ourselves to a temporary ing your duty to the country, than to win a mean necessity; we do not mean any harm. And he who cannot work himself up to this sentiment, and to this principle, has not, in my opin ion, studied and comprehended the dules of a section. In that part of the Union, they will appeal to the anti-slavery sentiment coin. They will throw him into auch a canvass as that, and to this principle, has not, in my opin ion, studied and comprehended the dules of a section. ion, studied and comprehended the du iss of a patriot. I say, I deem it a matter of high national importance, reaching far beyond the present, reaching deep into the future, affecting vitally, and perhaps forever, the fate and following vitally, and perhaps forever, the fate and following to this Republic, that these two great political organizations shall notionalize themselves in the approaching Presidential contest.

If they fail to do so, sectional strife—the end of which no man can foresee—and all the states and all the states and results and the Constitution of the Presidential canvass.

United States guaranties and protects in the southern states and also that the fugitive from labor, escaping from a southern State into a northern, shall be delivered up on the claim of his owner. I demand that you shall have the courage and patriotism to tell your people everywhere this constitutional truth, and teach them that it is their duty to recognize and shide by it. They enjoy the protection and benefit of the Constitution in all the shide which no man can foresee—and all the shide which and comprehended the du iss of a patriot. They will throw him into auch a canvass.

They will throw him my country.

But the honorable member from North Carolins thinks there ought not to be any platform sdopted by the whig national convention. He forms which is well calculated to inspire such a feeling; but there is something in the late platform of the democratic party at Baltimore which is eminently patriotic, noble and bonor nlife. I would feel myself personally degraded if I would raise a question upon that point.— They have come up to the necessities of the hour, and adopted resolutions which cover the whole question in reference to the sectional difficulties which have disturbed the harmony and threatened the existence of the Union. They fered in opinion, and may yet retain and maintain those differences of opinion, upon queations of mere expediency; which, though im-portant, are infinitely insignificant when compared with the consequences involved in this question-greater than all of those put togeth-Waiving at present all discussion in regard to those points in their platform which do ot meet my approval, I give them my testimony here to-day, before the whole country—and truth and honor require every man to do it— that they have nobly come up to the necessities of the times, have adopted resolutions in regard to these aectional questions to which I have re-14th, 1852.

The chairman stated that the first question tionalize the democratic party, and bring it up under consideration was House bill No. 43, to a high national standard which will recognise "making appropriations for the current and contingent expenses of the Indian department, and its parts—north and south; and which tends to for fulfilling treaty supplications with various In give peace, tranquility, and accurity to the
